

THE GRAND ENTERPRISE

Of the Cincinnati Candidate, Hon. J. M. Foraker—His Reception at the Grand Hotel and his Speeches to an Immense and Enthusiastic Crowd of People.

Kennedy clearly had the lead among the delegates and outsiders yesterday morning as the names were called and fast to the effect that Foraker's name would not be presented. Careful observers estimated that the head of the old ticket if placed in nomination would not get more than a two-fifths vote on the first ballot, and would get less thereafter. But the shrewd Cincinnati politicians in charge of Foraker's interest circulated the word that Judge Foraker, accompanied by more than one hundred delegates pledged to his support, would arrive at half past three and then prepared to give him a hearty reception. Banners were sent out and Foraker men in abundance were prevailed upon to wait at the Arcade Depot for the train, and handsome Foraker badges were distributed among the large crowd present. The train was nearly an hour late, but the crowd waited patiently and welcomed it with cheers. When Judge Foraker appeared on the platform the cheering was renewed. The Judge was accompanied by Amor Smith, W. B. Smith, D. W. McClung, L. A. Ebelby, Lewis Seaton, Hamilton county delegates, and the Montgomery delegation, headed by Major Bickham, R. M. Nevins and Al. Kunkler, escorted by a Dayton and a portion of the Twelfth ward Foraker club. As soon as he entered the Arcade Hotel Judge Foraker was called to, and after some lively music from the band, stepping out onto the balcony, made the following speech:

My Fellow Citizens—I sincerely thank you for this very kind, cordial and complimentary greeting, and I sincerely trust that by this time tomorrow afternoon I may have occasion to thank you again. [Applause.] I have come here, however (and with just a word I shall excuse myself), in order that I might attend this convention and with you help to give expression to the Republican sentiment of the State of Ohio. [Applause.] Whether you see fit to entrust our party banner again to my hands, or to give it to my worthy and esteemed friend, General Kennedy or General Beatty, or to anyone else who shall be wanted, I pledge you that no man in Ohio will better satisfy with the result than I shall be. And I say to you that whether you give it to me or to one of them, the ticket nominated by this Convention will have no better support from any man than that which I shall give to it from the first to the last day of the campaign. [Applause.]

It is a matter of but little comparative consequence what one of the leaders you may name, but it is a matter of the highest moment that the campaign which we have come here for the purpose of inaugurating shall be made triumphant and successful. What we want to do is to keep up from this time until the election in October this enthusiasm with which you have inaugurated this opening, to the end that when the election has been held the result may inspire and give new life to Republicanism throughout the whole United States of America.

At the end of this most little speech Mr. Foraker was enthusiastically applauded. After the band had played another selection, the crowd again set to yelling for Foraker and presently he again appeared upon the balcony, and spoke as follows:

"I certainly very much appreciate the compliment of being called here a second time. If there are any people that I would more gladly than any other make such a response to, it is the people who are here today who came from the city of Dayton."

"There are quite a number of other distinguished gentlemen who are on the inside who will be glad to address you if you wish to hear them speak. For myself you must excuse me with a mere expression of my thanks and the assurance that I appreciate the compliment which you have seen fit to confer upon me." [Applause.]

The excitement at this time was great. The Arcade was densely packed, and the waving of banners on every side and of the banner of the Foraker club, together with the appearance of the crowd, many of whom wore white hats, and most of whom displayed badges, gave a foretaste of what may be expected before the nominee of the Republican party is chosen.

The Foraker boom thus started was kept up until an early hour this morning, and will be renewed about eight o'clock, at which hour preparations will be made to receive the Blaine club, of Cincinnati. While the boom is interesting, the startling fact remains nevertheless true, that incoming delegations report such disaffection towards Foraker as make his nomination extremely improbable.

Logan County's Candidate.

The Ohio State Journal of Wednesday has the following sketch of Gen. R. P. Kennedy, of Logan county:

As the name of General R. P. Kennedy will be presented to the Springfield convention as gubernatorial candidate the readers of the State Journal will be interested in a sketch of his life and public services. The following is taken from Whitlaw Reid's "Ohio in the War":

"R. P. Kennedy was at college in Connecticut at the commencement of the rebellion. He hastened to his home in Ohio and joined the Twenty-third Ohio as second lieutenant June 1, 1861. On February 9, 1862, he was promoted to first lieutenant, and served as assistant adjutant general on General Seamon's staff at the battle of Olney Run, South Mountain and Antietam. On October 7, 1862, he was appointed assistant adjutant general of United States volunteers, with the rank of captain, and assigned to duty on General Crook's staff. He served in this capacity during the campaign of the Army of the Cumberland, from immediately after the battle of Stone River until after the battle of Mission Ridge in November, 1863.

"Captain Kennedy served on General Kennerly's staff through the Atlanta campaign and at its close was ordered by General Grant to the Department of West Virginia, and was made adjutant general of that department.

"On November 17, 1864, he was promoted to major and assistant adjutant general of volunteers, and lieutenant colonel by brevet. He served in this capacity on the staff of General Crook, commanding the department until March, 1865, when for gallant and meritorious services he was made colonel of the One Hundred and Ninety-sixth regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry. He was mustered out September 10, 1865, after which he began the practice of law in his native town, Bellefontaine, O. His brevet rank as brigadier general dates from March 13, 1865.

"Having practiced his profession until 1878, he was appointed and commissioned by President Hayes collector for the Fourth collection district of Ohio, in which capacity he served until retired under the consolidation law in 1883, which merged the Fourth into the Toledo district, after which he resumed the practice of his profession in Bellefontaine, in which he is now engaged."

General Kennedy has always been a zealous Republican, taking an active part in all its campaigns since he was mustered out of the army, rendering distinguished service as a speaker, not only at home but in the New England States, New York, Pennsylvania and many of the western States also. His ability as a public speaker is of a high order. In the discharge of all his duties he has shown himself faithful and capable. With out intending to express any preference as between the distinguished gentlemen whose names will be presented to the convention, justice requires of us the opinion that if the choice fall upon General Kennedy the standard will not be confided to unworthy hands.

nor if elected will the high office be entrusted to incapable hands.

Hon. T. W. Brotherton.

To the Editor of the Globe-Republic: Wapakoneta, O., June 10.—While all interest seems to be centered in the Governorship, the delegates should not lose sight of the fact that the "makeup" of the balance of the ticket is of the greatest importance. The candidates chosen should be those of the greatest strength and be fairly representative of the several sections of the State. If Foraker is accorded the first place the convention could not better display its wisdom than to nominate Hon. T. W. Brotherton, of Auglaize county, for Lieutenant Governor. This nomination would stir up a degree of enthusiasm in the Northwest, such as has never been known in this Democratic libralist.

The plucky Republicans of Auglaize, who carried off the banner in 1880, and who last fall made another tremendous stride (33.5 per cent. gain), would make the woods ring with their delight, and it may safely be said, would carry that Bourbon county for Mr. Brotherton. The northwest has never had a Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and Auglaize never a representative in the State ticket. They present in the candidacy of Mr. Brotherton a sterling Republican, an excellent lawyer, a rousing stumpster, and a gentleman of integrity of character; one who has spent much of his time and means for the cause, and a man whose reputation is without spot or blemish. No answer.

Heavy Speakers.

About nine o'clock last evening, in response to repeated calls from the crowd massed in the Arcade, General Beatty appeared at the south balcony, and during a lull in the music, spoke for about ten minutes. He said that while many present had their first choice, and many their second, it would be found after the nomination had been made by the Convention, that the nominee would be the first choice of all; moreover, the nominee will be elected by a large majority!

While the average American citizen, said General Beatty, is a man of many ideas, the great men have been usually men of a single dominant idea. It was the almost one-sided Whittely and Leffel that laid the foundations of industries, which drew your city from a struggling village to a great and thriving city. So in politics, the party of one dominant idea is destined to succeed if that idea be one grounded in truth and justice. Such an organization has been the Republican party, and in the coming campaign it enters, as before, with the watchwords of liberty, a free ballot and a fair count, and it is bound to win.

General Beatty retired amid the cheers of his supporters, interspersed with calls for Foraker and Kennedy from the constituents of the two last-named.

Capt. P. Folkerth, candidate for Board of Public Works and Dr. W. G. Bryant, of this city, met today for the first time since they were prisoners together in the Taylor hospital, in Winchester, Virginia, during the war. Dr. Bryant at that time, though a prisoner, was in charge of the hospital and was instrumental in helping Capt. Folkerth to escape. The Captain was suffering from a severe wound but got inside of the Union lines and was cared for by Gen. Robert Schenck, of Dayton. It is needless to add that Dr. Bryant is now for Folkerth and Folkerth for Dr. Bryant.

Hon. B. W. Arnett, of Xenia, who goes into the next Legislature; Col. Bob. Harlan, of Cincinnati, delegate from the 6th ward; Rev. R. A. Johnson, delegate from Muskingum; and Mr. George E. Conly, of Cincinnati, honored the GLOBE-REPUBLIC by a call, last night.

Many persons hold strange notions about the locusts, which, by the way, are not truly locusts, but seventeen-year cicadas. The following are a few facts about our visitors: They do not eat the leaves of trees or plants as some suppose. An examination will show that they cannot for they have not the cutting lateral pairs of the leaf-eaters, but have a tongue or sucker not unlike that of flies or bees. Only the males make the sound we hear. It is produced by a white corrugated membrane under the wing on each side. This vibrates and is itself a part of the wing of a large cavity which acts as a resonator and is situated on the under side and between the thorax and abdomen. The wings and legs have nothing to do with the sound. The females are provided with a drill-shaped ovipositor, with which when a longitudinal incision is made in the young branch of a tree they insert their eggs, about 600 in number, in two rows in the cavity of the pith. These hatch in about six weeks and the young larvae fall to the ground, enter it and attach themselves by their heads to the roots of the tree and there remain for nearly seventeen years, living upon its sap, when they come forth, shed their pupa shell and fly away as perfect insects.

The most important question now is who will get tickets to the State Convention?

The wise ones are asking who is the Chairman of the State Central Committee, and the Gloom-Raincoat is sought for to find his name more than a rush to get the first mail.

Representative timber is dwindling down to the little end of the horn, and now Madison township says we want the Senator. I expect we may want the Governorship on the 11th.

The Springfield show the Best They Are Made Of.

Although a very one-sided affair, as to score, the game at the base ball park yesterday afternoon between the Dayton and Springfield was really an interesting and well-played contest, the Springfield making but two or three errors and the Dayton not many more. The Dayton battery, Aydelotte and Zaig, is a fairly good one, and would be very effective with any team not so good at slugging as the Springfield. As it was, they made eleven base hits, with a total of seventeen bases, eight of these being made in the first inning and two of the three runs in that inning earned. Arundel and Faas were the battery for the Springfield, Arundel being hit safely but five times, with total bases five. The Dayton were shut out only by the actually phenomenal work of the home players, hits that seemed inevitably safe counting an out for the batter, by the great fielding of Baker, West, Shoup, Ardner and Fisher. In the second inning Dayton had men on second and third, both of whom were run out between bases in the nearest manner. This sharp play was repeated in the fourth, two men being left on bases. In the same inning, Morrison, Klusman and Hughes, of the Dayton, made a brilliant double play.

The time for advertising the game being very short the crowd was small, but this afternoon when the same teams meet again, it is likely to be all it should and good sport is promised. Aydelotte, the Dayton pitcher, is said to be the inventor of the new game of base ball with cards, recently described in the Cincinnati papers.

The Springfield go to Columbus Friday and Saturday and to Dayton Sunday. Manager Fisher thinks if the present political excitement can be tided over, there will be a revival of interest and patronage of the Inter-State League. Consequently the team will hold together for the present.

Following is the score by innings:

Innings.....1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Dayton.....0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0
Springfield.....3 0 1 0 2 2 1 — 9
Umpire—F. Carroll, of Springfield.

There has evidently been considerable laxity in the distribution of press tickets. Some country weeklies, who always clip their reports from the dailies, or who get the convention reports as plate matter, have been assigned seats, while large and well-known State dailies have been slighted, and find it difficult to get even entrance tickets. At least one press privilege was openly offered for sale by the recipient, both before and after the privilege had been secured from the committee. Such things may be unavoidable, but they should be watched.

The Nalad Queen.

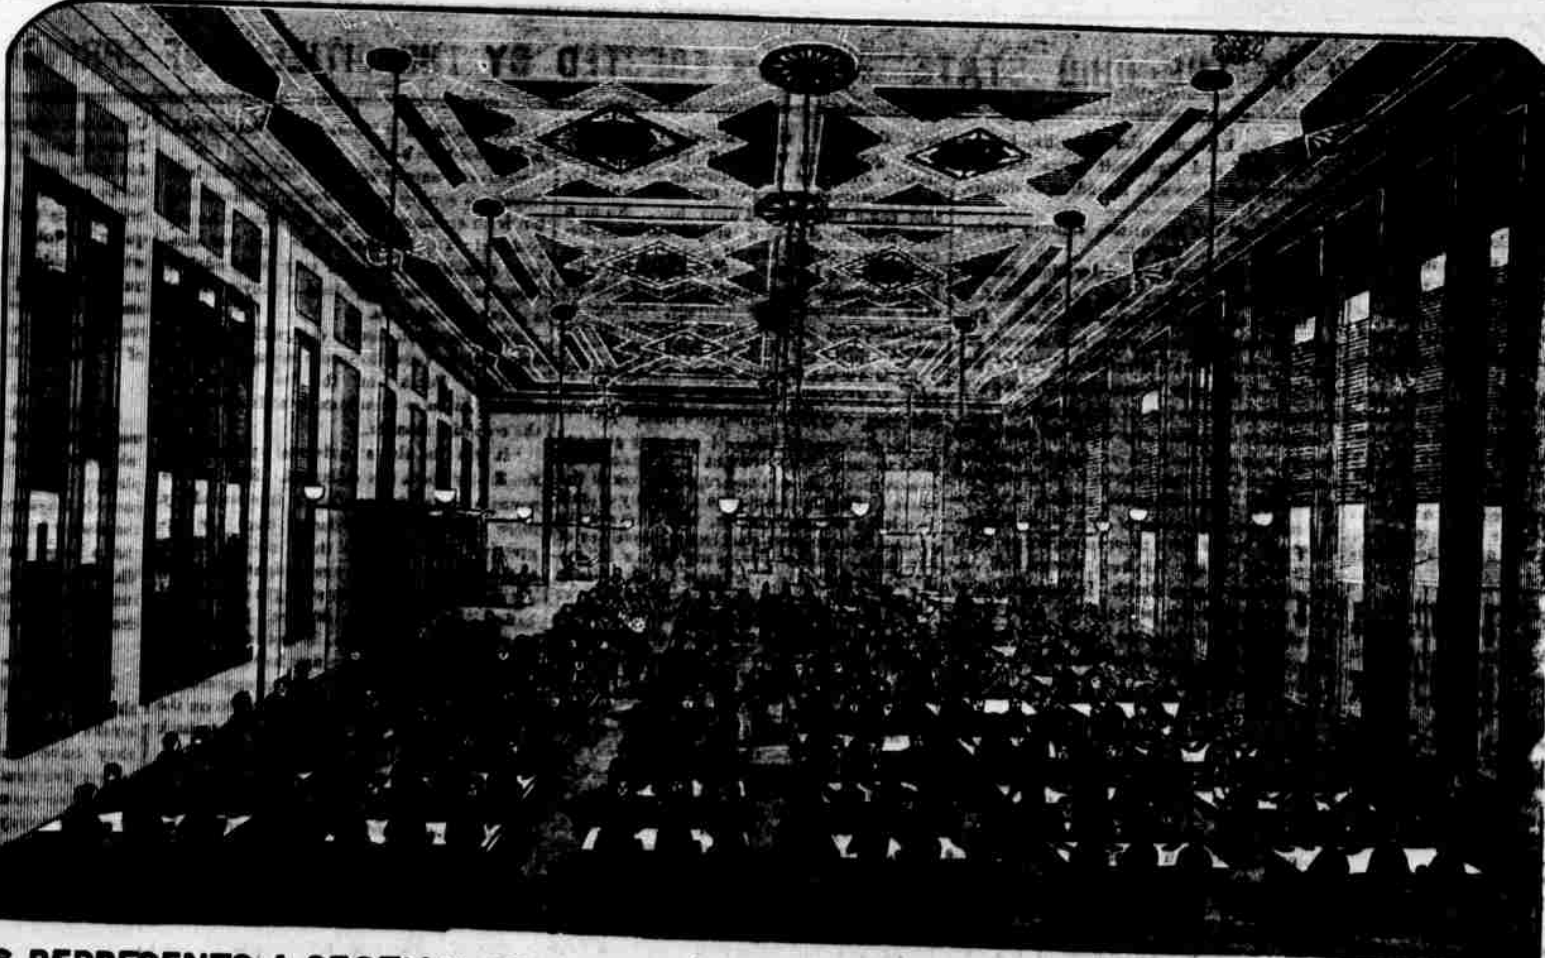

The Grand Opera House was packed from top to bottom, with a fine audience last evening to witness the special revival of the magnificent spectacle, "The Nalad Queen." The performers have lost none of their proficiency by a few days' rest, and the scenery is as grand and gorgeous as ever. This evening's entertainment closes the season, and none should miss seeing the spectacle, which is, without doubt, the finest ever presented in this city.

A canvass was made on the I. B. & W. train from Sandusky just before it reached here this afternoon, with many delegates to the convention and, the vote stood: Kennedy 89, Foraker 23, Beatty 1. Ex-Gov. Chas. Foster was a passenger on the train but declined to express a preference.
